Department of Social Policy

LSE Fellow in Health Policy

Salary from £33,784 to £40,867 pa inclusive with potential to progress to £43,973 pa inclusive

This is a fixed term appointment for two years from 1 September 2016 to 31 August 2018

The Department of Social Policy at the LSE is the longest established in the UK and has received the highest possible rating in all Research Assessment Exercises carried out in the UK. According to the latest QS World University Rankings by Subject, Department of Social Policy ranked 2nd in the world. The Department invites applications for the position of LSE Fellow in Health Policy.

The Department welcomes applications from candidates that have a proven ability to pursue a coherent programme of health policy research and scholarship in any relevant domain. The LSE Fellow will be expected to contribute to teaching on the Executive MSc Health Economics, Outcomes and Management in Cardiovascular Sciences degree programme. The Department particularly welcomes applications from candidates that can teach in any of the following areas: Health Care Quality, Outcomes Research, Evidence Review and Synthesis, Health Policy and Management, and Research Design for Health Policy Evaluation.

You will have completed, or be close to obtaining a PhD in health policy, health services research, health economics (or another related social science discipline). You must have relevant teaching experience and excellent communication skills. Teaching-related administrative experience would be an advantage.

The other criteria that will be used when shortlisting for this post can be found on the person specification which is attached to this vacancy on LSE's online recruitment system.

We offer an occupational pension scheme, generous annual leave and excellent training and development opportunities.
